P.S. Don't Forget: Card Party Fundraiser

Friday, Oct. 21 7:00 PM St. Benedict's Church Justice was wearing a blindfold. An actor playing the part of Nicholas Amato, County Executive, was passing out $1000 bills, and a character named Ashmani was covered with dust from head to be. It was a play about garbage incinerators that was presented by Greenpeace and members of the Ironbound Committee Against Toxic Waste

While some of the play was humorous it had a serious point to make. As the person who played Blind Justice said, "In the play I wear a blindfold to show that I don't see that Essex County and the companies which want to build the incinerator are breaking six laws to build it."

It seemed appropriate that the play was presented in front of the Essex County Court House, with the Lincoln statue as one of the spectators.

"We wanted to present this play in front of the Court House, where laws are supposed to be enforced, not broken, to emphasize that what is going on is illegal. They're breaking six laws to build the garbage incinerator," said Arnold Cohen, from the ICATW.

Ainda que parte da peça rosse comica, havia nela um ponto sério. Como disse o personagem ue fazia de Justiça Cega", "Na peça eu uso uma máscara a tapar os olhos para demonstrar que eu não vejo c Ondado de Essex e as companhias que querem construir o incinerador a violar 5 leis."

Foi apropriado que a peça tivesse sido representada em frente do Tribunal do Essex County, com a estátua de Lincoln a Essex County, com a servir de espectador.

"Queremos representar esta peça em frente do Tribunal, onde as leis devem ser feitas e não violadas, para demonstrar que o que está a acontecer é liegal. Eles estão a violar seis leis com a construção do incinrador," disia Arnold Cohen do Comité do Ironbound Contra Produtos Tóxicos (ICATW).
